On 10 January 1954, the Flak Kaserne in Wismar was heavily occupied. From 1 to 10 January, 180 to 200 soldiers wearing black-bordered crimson epaulets were daily seen leaving the installation for training at the airfield as were soldiers who, between 9:30 p.m. and 11 p.m., practiced night marches. On 9 January, soldiers were trained on 57-mm AT guns at the training field west of the installation. Soldiers practicing carbine firing with live ammunition in the Koepernitz Tal training area and 5 or 6 trucks engaged in drivers' training in the terrain were daily observed. Motor vehicles driving to, and from, the installation
